*(1691, but query) Marriage settlement on the marriage of Edward Foden and Elizabeth Knight:
messuage in Fulford, closes called the Thatchers and other closes; also moiety of the manor of Cheadle Grange. [SRO D1798/666/299]*

At the 1695 election the partnership of Philip and Thomas Foley proved too strong for the other sitting Member, John Chetwynd, and an army officer, Matthew Ducie Moreton, who had both made some interest before desisting. This Foley partnership faced a more serious challenge in 1698 from Moreton and Edward Foden, the recorder of Stafford. Both men held estates locally, the former at Moreton and the latter at Haughton, four miles from the borough. The Foleys were prepared to spend money to defend their position, giving £100 towards endowing the town's almshouses in election year (as did John Chetwynd) and they were evidently successful, easily outpolling their opponents. An analysis of the poll book shows 121 double votes for the Foleys as against only 53 for the Moreton-Foden ticket. Perhaps significantly, the more Tory-inclined Thomas Foley was unable to pick up many votes from his rivals, whereas 35 voters chose to support Philip Foley and Moreton, a committed Whig. [PARL]*

81i). "Doctor Robert Feild, buried in the Minster, September ye 9th, 1680." (Par. Reg., St. M.-le-B.) Robert Feild was collated to the stall of Fenton at York, 3 Aug. 1670, and on the 3rd of Sept. following he was made sub-dean. On 2 May, 1671, he was collated to the rectory of Barton-le-Beans, Co. Notts, which he held till his death. On 9 July, 1673, he was admitted D.D. at Oxford. On 27 April, 1675, he was made archdeacon of Cleveland; and on 30 Dec. 1676 he was collated to the stall of Dunham. Dr. Feild died 9 Sept. 1680, aged 42, and was buried in St. Stephen's chapel (wherein his patron and benefactor archbishop Sterne, was afterwards interred), under a blue stone on which was formerly the following inscription:

"Hic jacet Robertus Feild, S. T. P. archidiaconus de Cleveland, necnon hujus ecclesiæ sub-decanus et præbendarius, qui obiit 9° Sept. anno Domini, 1680, ætatis sure 42." (Torre, p. 226.)

The will of " Robert Feild, Doctor in Divinity, Archdeacon of Cleaveland," who appears to have resided at Bishopthorpe, bears date 3 Sept. 1680. He bequeaths the moiety of a tenement in Wordington, Co. Oxon, to his niece Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Edward Foden of Stafford. To his sister Priscilla, wife of Vincent Savidge, he leaves an annuity of £20, and legacies of £50. each to his sister Mary Knight, and his niece Mary Blencoe. " To Mr. Fell, a fellow of Eaton Colledge, Grotius' workes, Sosinian's workes, St. Austin's workes & the Critickes; "-the rest of his books to his nephew Mr. Tho. Blencoe, clerk.- His nephew, Edward Foden residuary legatee and sole executor [Pro. 11 Sept. 1680].
